NAZI SECRET POLICE BOARD LINER AND TAKE GUDENBERG

Bristol Resident Is Wanted In The United States In Spy-Ring Probe

LIKELY TO BE FREED

Belief Is That His Arrest Is Only a Formality, and He Cannot Be Extradited

(By International News Service)

CUXHAVEN, Germany, June 3—Secret police agents, it was understood, boarded the liner Hamburg as she entered harbor today, to take Werner George Gudenberg, of Bristol, Pa., into custody.

Gudenberg is wanted in the United States on charges of espionage. Gudenberg's fate here presumably will parallel that of Dr. Ignatz Griebl, who was jailed for a short time and then freed. Like Griebl, who was connected with a spy investigation in New York, Gudenberg is accused only of stowing away on the liner and lacking a passport.

Spying, being a political offense, is not a crime which permits extradition.

Merchants To Close Stores On Wednesday Afternoons

Practically every business establishment on Mill street will close Wednesday afternoons for the remainder of June and during the months of July and August, according to a report read to the Mill Street Business Men's Association when that organization held its regular monthly meeting at Ye Olde Delaware House last evening.

This does not include, however, the drug, cut-rate, and soda fountain stores, since this is their particular season and since the public places its greatest demands upon them during the hot summer months.

I. Wolson, chairman of the committee on this project, indicated that a survey by his committee showed that approximately 43 stores on Mill street will be closed on Wednesday afternoons, from 1 o'clock.

Edgar Spencer, chairman, called the meeting to order. More than 20 members of the Association were present. Two new members, Anthony LaPolla and Frank Delia, were accepted into membership. The treasurer's report indicated a favorable balance.

One interesting subject to the majority of the members present was the late evening closing hours of the stores on Mill street. In keeping with the practices of other business sections, and also to allow the proprietors a little more leisure time, it was suggested that the members close their businesses at 9 p. m. during the week, with the exception of Friday and Saturday evenings.

A report of the publicity committee, headed by Marty Green, showed that the recent NYA exhibition, at which the Association had a booth, was a success. He also reported on the idea of a park and bathing beach along the River, west of the Mill street wharf, and said that no such idea could be carried through at present because of litigation between the State of Pennsylvania and the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company as to ownership of the land.

Mr. Fitch, chairman of the social and entertainment committee, told the members that he would secure a speaker for the July meeting. He also outlined tentative plans for an outing for members of the Association. M. J. Gordon, Joseph Eiberson, and Robert Weik were added to this committee.

A general discussion on the possibility of obtaining the school yards in the Borough for organized play and recreational grounds during the summer months was held by the members. The Association believes that such a program would be an asset to the community, both from the children's standpoint and from the safety factor standpoint.

Announcement was also made that in the near future there may be a scheduled bus service between Langhorne, or possibly Newtown or Doylestown and Bristol. The Association believes that this would be an excellent plan.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Funeral was held today for William R. Landis, 81, who for 50 years made his home in Plumstead Township.

The deceased died at his home on Tuesday, he being in ill health for some time.

A native of Hilltown township, Mr. Landis, who also for some years engaged in the commission business, was a son of the late Ephraim and Catharine (nee Rosenberger) Landis. His wife, Ella (nee Campbell) Landis, died 13 years ago. A son, the Rev. Elbert E. Landis, also preceded him in death.

Survivors include two sons, William H. Landis, East Greenville, and Oliver C. Landis, residing on the homestead; a brother, Reuben R. Landis, Dublin; two sisters, Mrs. Mary Myers, Doylestown, and Mrs. Frank Alderfer, of near Dublin, ten grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

The deceased was a member of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, Dublin.

A number of pupils of Grace Degener Wilson-Lavery presented a recital of piano numbers at Richboro during the past week, with Bertha Brinker d'Albites as the soloist.

The pupils taking part either in solo number or ensemble playing, were: Mrs. Janet Blum, Mrs. Dorothy Gleeten Degener, Miss Peggy P. Allen, George Ermentrout and Charles and Marshal Laferty.

In the audience besides the parents and friends of the participants were Alonzo Stone, noted musical theorist, of Philadelphia, and Andre D'Irsay, Hungarian pianist.

The following members of St. James' Lutheran Church, Chalfont, on Wednesday attended the Lutheran Ministerium held in Christ Church, Allentown, and witnessed the ordination of their new pastor, Rev. Myron Eichner: Mr. and Mrs. John D. Derstine, Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Krupp, Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Wolfinger, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Young, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Greenly, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Hockman, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Bruner, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Fly, Leroy C. King, Mrs. George Brower, Kathryn Bishop, Mildred Bruner, Ruth and Doris Fly and Mabel Thierolf.

The winner of the senior declamation contest at Doylestown high school this week was Miss Katharine Lee, who pleased with "Patterns."

Miss Ruth Carlen, who gave readings from Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," placed second.

Eugene Speer, presenting Mark Twain's "Editing An Agricultural Paper," won third place. The winners will receive prizes at the commencement. Miss Lee will receive $5; Miss Carlen, $2; and Mr. Speer, $1.

TWO FEATURE ACTS TO BE GIVEN AT HORSE SHOW

Burt Northrup and the Beatty Brothers Are Booked For Sunday Afternoon

AT THE LAING ESTATE

Two big feature attractions have been booked for the annual Spring horse show of the Bristol Riding Club which is scheduled to open a two-day program tomorrow. These features will be in addition to the regular numbers on the program. The show opens on the Laing Estate, Newport Road, beginning tomorrow at noon and at the same time on the following day.

Through the generosity of Marty Green, a member of the Club and a prominent merchant of Bristol, Burt Northrup will give a performance on Sunday afternoon. The Beatty Brothers, juvenile riders of Merchantville, N. J., will also appear on Sunday afternoon in their marvelous act.

A preview of the Northrup act will be given Sunday afternoon at one o'clock at Wood and Franklin streets, in front of St. Ann's Club House for the benefit of the children who cannot attend the horse show. Northrup and "Bess" will perform for 10 minutes and all children are urged to be on hand.

The Beatty Brothers perform all of the trick riding acts on ponies that

Rinehold-Bagley Nuptial Ceremony Is Solemnized

The wedding of Miss Emma Bagley, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Bagley, East Circle; and Leon Rinehold, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Rinehold, 311 East Circle, was solemnized last evening at seven o'clock in St. James's Episcopal rectory, with the Rev. George E. Boswell, rector, officiating.

Miss Fannie Bagley, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid; and Thomas Broadbridge, Croydon, served as best man.

The bride was attired in a flowered silk crepe costume, large blue hat and blue accessories. The bridesmaid wore a grey silk costume, blue hat and blue accessories.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate families of the contracting parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Rinehold will reside in their newly-furnished home at 329 Garfield street.

BENSALEM BOARD TOLD OF COMMENCEMENT

Tuesday Evening is Date Set For the Presentation of Diplomas

CLASS TO HEAR SERMON

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, June 3—All members were present with William Abel, president, in the chair, when the Bensalem Township School Board met in the High School here last evening for the June meeting. This was the next to the last meeting for the present school term, the last being July 7th.

Few of the standing committees had reports to make. The Building and Grounds committee reported that a few minor repairs had been made during the month of May. The treasurer's report indicated that less than $1,000 had been received in taxes.

Announcement was made that the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class will be preached by the Rev. Herman Doh, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Andalusia at 10.30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Commencement exercises for the 84 graduating students, the largest graduating class in the history of Bensalem, will be held in the high school Tuesday evening. Charles Swope, president of West Chester State Teachers College, will be the featured speaker of the evening. The theme of the exercises will be "Pennsylvania," which will be given in the form of a pageant by members of the senior class.

S. K. Faust gave the doctor's and nurse's reports and indicated that there was little sickness among the students during the month of May. He also reported that the dental clinic sponsored by the Cornwells P. T. A. on May 25, was a great success. Twenty-three students were treated at that time.

The audiometer test revealed that 20% of the students in the grammar grades were defective in their hearing.

Announcement was made that the Senior class will visit Washington on June 9, 10 and 11th, with S. K. Faust, Miss Schroeder and Miss Cecelia Snyder, members of the faculty, also going on the trip.

ANNOUNCE CHANGE OF PRIESTS

PHILADELPHIA, June 3—His Eminence Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of the Philadelphia diocese, today announced the transfer of approximately sixty priests; the changes included: The Rev. Joseph P. F. Rodgers, Church of St. Charles Borromeo, Cornwells Heights, to Church of St. Barbara, Philadelphia. The Rev. Anthony M. Garrity, Church of St. Jerome, Tamaqua, to Church of St. Charles Borromeo, Cornwells Heights. The Rev. Walter A. Psulkowski, Church of St. Isidore, Quakertown, to Church of the Holy Trinity, Phoenixville.

FOR WORTHY CAUSE

A card party will be conducted in the K. of C. home, Radcliffe street, this evening, for a worthy cause. The affair is in charge of Mrs. James Cullen.

Maple Shade Youth Graduates at Annapolis

A Bristol Township young man, whose father lies buried in France, and in whom material interest has been s hown by the Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, graduated from the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Md., yesterday morning, the commander of Bracken Post, Jonathan Miller, Tullytown, witnessing the ceremony.

The young man who completed his four-year course at the Naval Academy, is Frank D. Whalen, son of Mrs. Alice D. Whalen, Prospect avenue, Maple Shade.

Whalen's father, James P. Whalen, died in France during the World War, he having seen active service there. Today he rests in the fields of France, as his "buddies," members of the American Legion, have aided his son in advancement of his career. Young Whalen, by virtue of his father's sacrifice for his country, was eligible to admission to the Naval Academy, 40 thus being selected at large throughout the United States for the course. He entered Annapolis on June 11, 1934.

Also attending the exercises yesterday was his mother. The diplomas were presented to the young men by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. Whalen was a friend of the late Commander William Riley, of Bracken Post, and had had hopes of Mr. Riley witnessing the graduation exercises.

Young Whalen, with five others of the 439 graduates, will within a few days become attached to the U. S. S. "Savannah," a new ship which has just completed its "shake-down" cruise. The "Savannah" was at Annapolis during June Week. For a time it will be located at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, operating out of that city for cruises. It is expected that a journey will soon be made to the West Coast, via the Panama Canal.

Scouting Executive Is Speaker at Rotary Meeting

Scouting Executive William F. Livermore, was the featured speaker at the regular weekly meeting of the Rotary Club in the Elks' Home here yesterday afternoon. Frank Voit, president, was in the chair at the meeting which was very well attended. Harold J. Kendall, Morrisville Rotarian, was a visitor, and Herbert Pettit, local business man, and pioneer of Scouting in Bristol, was also a guest.

Livermore outlined briefly for the members of the club the growth of Scouting in this section. He pointed out that about 10 years ago there were 750 Scouts, and this number was later increased to 1500 and then during the recent depression the number had dropped again to about 750. Activities have also been curtailed. The greatest proportion of the Scouting work is being done by the existing civic organizations, including the churches and service clubs.

At present, according to the speaker, there are 1,000 Scouts in Bucks county, 348 Cubs and 110 Sea Scouts.

Club singing was led by Ernest Gamble, who introduced some of the songs which were sung at the district Rotary Convention.

Dr. J. Fred Wagner, chairman of the community center project, stated that this center is now functioning and he invited all interested persons to visit the headquarters.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

Out In The Open

WASHINGTON, June 1. THE White House pretense of the non-political use of the people's money has now worn so thin that it would seem even the least discerning must see through it. Mr. Roosevelt may continue his strange press conference assertions of not being interested in the primaries, but his aides, advisers, friends and relatives are all hotly engaged in prosecuting the "purge."

BY THIS is meant the elimination from public life of the Democrats who have been independent enough to oppose the President's policies and are candidates for either nomination or election this year. Among the Presidential intimates no secret is made that the defeat of these men is to be accomplished by the weight of the great governmental agencies through which the Treasury billions are distributed, chief of which is the WPA. On the contrary, some of them are quite boastful about it.

THE aloof air with which the charges that they were doing exactly what they are doing used to be met has now been abandoned and all sorts of defenses and excuses to justify active participation in party politics of the heads of these immense money-distributing agencies are being circulated. This fall, as the United States News points out, will see 4,000,000 farmers eligible for checks, 3,000,000 families on WPA, another 3,000,000 on local relief, 2,000,000 others getting old-age pensions

CLASS OF '38 SAILS IN FANCY THROUGH HIGH SCHOOL SEAS

"S. S. '38" is Title of Presentation For Class Night Program, Bristol High

UNIQUELY ARRANGED

Mothers' Association Essay Award Presented To Raymond Dewees

The good ship "'38", carrying members of this year's graduating class of Bristol High School, sailed through the four high school years and into the future, last evening, as class night exercises were presented in the high school auditorium.

The duties of the captain, sailors, stewards, stewardesses, were cared for by 37 members of the class; while the remainder enjoyed the "voyage" as passengers. An orchestra provided music on a moon-lit sea, and entertainers disported for the pleasure of the passenger list, and the crowd which filled the auditorium to witness the advance of "S. S. '38" as it sailed gaily through smooth waters.

Unique was this presentation, with the story basis ably presented through the medium of the spoken word, poems, songs and dances. Upon the stage was reproduced "A deck" of the ship, with the ship's rail, life preservers, smoke stack, life-boat, etc., giving a realistic back-ground.

"All Aboard" was the title of act one, and as the passengers gaily tripped up the gang-plank for the four-year voyage through high school Captain Stanley Dick, his sailors, stewards and stewardesses provided for their comfort. Act two showed the group "All at Sea," with an orchestra providing music for the dancers and entertainers. The orchestra was composed of Marion Mulholland, piano; Joseph DiLissio, saxophone; Elvira Paglione, violin; James VanZant, trumpet. The singer, William Roberts, pleased with "Treasure Island."

Entertainers also included the following numbers during act two, the time of which was 11 p. m., on the high seas: Song and dance, "Me and Marie," Anita Zug, Melvin Fry; tap dance, Mildred Booz; duet, "Girl in the Bonnet of Blue," Elvira Paglione and Clara Caucci; original monologue, Kathryn Quinn; quartette, "Shortnin' Bread," Harry Hinman, Wesley Berry, Vernon Howell, Melvin Fry.

During the course of the entertainment numbers Captain Dick in his

Story of "Ba Thane" Will Present Life in Burma

EDDINGTON, June 3—The story of "Ba Thane" will be presented in a missionary play at the closing session of the fourth annual School of Missions in the Eddington Presbyterian Church parish house, this evening.

The play, which deals with life in Burma, the setting of which is in the home of an American Christian missionary, is being directed by Miss Miriam S. Peters, Bridgewater, world traveler, and a linguist of note.

Seven are members of the cast, the mission play being under the auspices of the School of Missions. The participants are inclusive of: an American missionary, Lawrence Davis; his wife, Sarah Jane White; their daughter, Georgiamary White; an American newspaperman, who is touring the world, Jack Scott; the villain, who is an oil driller in the Burmese fields, John Fettes; a native girl, Etta Vansant; her brother, George Tibbets.

The setting of "Ba Thane" is in the Burmese city of Rangoon, in the home of the American missionary. The customs of those living in this Bhuddist country, which has belonged to England since the year 1888, are presented in an interesting manner as the theme of the play is unwoven. The cause of the Christ as presented by the missionary in his church, school, hospitals, and other activities in Burma is shown, with a tragic note struck as the converted Burmese lose faith in the missionary and his cause when they disbelieve his story of a depression in America affecting continuance of many activities in their midst. But the message of Christ and His Cross are put across by the Christian worker in spite of antagonism.

The congregation will learn that Buddhists become excellent Christians upon their conversion, the Buddhist code of morals being a high one; but the Buddhist religion holds forth no hope in this life, while the Christian life gives hope. The breaking of the faith of the Burmese in one whom they considered their friend, and the missionary's subsequent re-winning of them is told. The plot also reveals the ruining of the life of the native Burmese girl who has been cast aside by the oil driller after she accepted his attentions, which in the eyes of Burmese is a promise of marriage.

The play is most interesting, and the cast has been practicing faithfully under tutelage of Miss Peters.

During the evening an electric bulb will gleam at Rangoon on the map of the world at the front of the hall. This map, used throughout the school of missions, has 16 bulbs, each one placed at a point where the Presbyterian Church has mission fields.

THINKING MAKES IT SO

Which of you by taking thought can add once cubit unto his stature?

The power of thought on the health of the human body is never quite out of the calculations of physicians who find that a large percentage of physical ailments is produced by the thought of the patient. At a national meeting of doctors, it was declared by Dr. G. Canby Robinson of Baltimore that in 80 per cent of the average run of medical cases admitted to Johns Hopkins Hospital emotional factors were present. They were directly related to the illnesses in 66 per cent of the cases, and in 38 per cent were the major precipitating cause. Discussion from the floor brought out that surveys in hospitals in New York and Boston tallied with this report.

"We found much to be traced to emotional causes even in organic disturbances," Dr. Robinson said. "Eventually these trace back to maladjustments of life and its problems. Many patients admitted to the public health service of the hospital have adverse social conditions leading to and often entirely responsible for their illnesses. There has been too little systematic study of disturbances of bodily functions from these causes."

The physicians' discovery of a need to look beyond anatomy and physiology and into the minds and souls of the ailing offers a compelling reason for greater consideration and investigation of adverse social conditions in their relation not only to the ills of society but to the ills of the human body.

ETIQUETTE NOTE

It may give you pleasure to visit the White House Roosevelts, but you mustn't say so; that is to say, if you are accepting an invitation and want to be, above all things, polite. What you must answer is that you have "the honor of accepting," not "the pleasure of accepting." It is a small point and hardly worth fussing about, but we thought you might like to know, just in case.

Authorities on such matters, ever chamberlains, equerries and maids in-waiting, have been known to disagree, but this fine point is decreed by the social secretary of the First Lady.

Mrs. Roosevelt herself is reported not to be strict on these details, she says they may be proper in a number of ways. Furthermore, it is not incumbent upon you to come to her parties. Until the Roosevelts reached the White House, a Presidential invitation was looked upon as a command, but not under the present regime. The Roosevelts came over in the Mayflower and might be expected to set themselves up as society mentors, but they don't. Mrs. Roosevelt has made it clear that she does not want any persons to feel they must accept her invitations if they have any reason to stay away.

The summer vacation problem seems already to have been solved by 65-year-old Com. Donald Macmillan who plans his seventeenth polar expedition.

It is true that riches and poverty make our classes, but sometimes a poor gal has the most class.

There is no glory in never failing. Any man can do that well by never attempting anything that isn't easy.

and several millions more on WPA jobs and in the paid Federal service.

—o—

THE business of inculcating among the beneficiaries of work relief, farm relief and public works generally the belief that it is to their personal interest to support only Administration candidates, which has been conducted for four years, more or less under cover, by Democratic politicians, supposedly without the approval or oven knowledge of the President, or his department heads, is now in the open. The President still preserves the pose of being remote and unconcerned, but that deceives only those who insist upon being deceived.

—o—

NOT one word of repudiation or reproof has come from him of the open declaration by Mr. Harry Hopkins, one of his closest friends and the unrestrained distributor of more billions than any other man ever handled, in favor of a rubber-stamp Congressman in Iowa making a fight against a Senator who wouldn't swallow the court-packing bill. It, of course, is impossible that Mr. Roosevelt does not realize that Mr. Hopkins' statement is equivalent to notice served upon voters on the relief rolls that the Administration expects their support, and that it has been unanimously construed as such notice. Those in position to know assert that the Hopkins declaration was engineered by Mr. Thomas Corcoran, reputed author of the President's "fire-side chats" and upon the most confidential and intimate terms with him.

THIS SMUG young man, who is himself on the RFC pay roll, is understood to be the "directing mind" of the campaign to beat Senator Gillette in Iowa. Certainly, no one is sufficiently credulous to believe that either he or Mr. Hopkins would take such steps without the approval and consent of Mr. Roosevelt, which makes the President's evasion of responsibility and his press conference equivocation less easy to look upon with tolerance. When the facts are fully grasped, the question presented to the voters in a number of States this fall and summer is quite simple. Briefly, it is this: Are they going to permit or condone the effort of the Federal Administration to punish its opponents, reward its friends and perpetuate itself in power through the use of the billions of dollars of public moneys voted for relief and public works?

NO ONE who reviews the record and knows the facts can have any doubt that the attempt is being made—and this time with practically no concealment. It is not too much to say that upon its success or failure hinges the future of the country. It is not too much to say that few more important questions have ever been presented to the people. That is why the Iowa primaries next Monday are of real national moment. It is encouraging to note that pressure has not succeeded in swinging Senator Clyde Herring against his colleague, who is the present Administration target, and that the strenuous turning on of "the heat" has not yet forced Secretary Wallace into line.

"CONTRABAND" by Dennis Wheatley

CHAPTER XXVII

With almost unendurable relief they grabbed the rope and held it. The gun was fired again and another life line hissed through the air above them. Gregory could just reach it as it fell so he left the first for Wells. With their last remnants of strength, fortified by the frantic will to live, they hauled the slack end of the ropes in and coiled them round their bodies, beneath their armpits, by thrusting them through the unresisting sand which had welled up to their shoulders.

"Ready?" came a hail from the group by the rocket gun.

"Heave away," shouted Gregory and the strain was taken up upon the ropes.

There followed the most ghastly struggle between the rescuers and those evil sands which were so loath to give up their prey. The imprisoned men thought that their bodies would be torn in half. They moaned in agony as the life lines gripped them like wire springs about their chests; cutting into their bodies and forcing the breath out of their lungs. They were lying at an angle now, with their heads toward their rescuers, their shoulders only supported by the pulling ropes, their torsos and feet still buried deep in the shifting sands.

For what seemed an eternity they were stretched as though upon a rack, striving with the tired muscles of their legs for even a fraction of movement which would free them, but it seemed that they were too firmly embedded ever to be drawn out.

It was Gregory who, through a mist of pain, realized that now their heads and shoulders were supported there was no longer any danger of their arms becoming permanently imprisoned if they chose to use them, so he plunged his hands down and began to heave out handfuls of the soft semi-liquid silt from in front of his chest.

The struggle lasted for nearly an hour. Gregory was free ten minutes before Wells. As the life line drew him over a steep bank of sand he slithered into the water. Then he was hauled aboard a big flat-bottomed speed boat, where he collapsed on the bottom boards, unconscious.

When he came to, Wells was beside him and their rescuers were applying restoratives. The ordeal had been such an appalling one that they were unable to speak and could not move a muscle without acute pain. Both of them lapsed into unconsciousness again as the speed boat's engine began to stutter. With a puff of blue smoke in its wake it roared out to sea.

They were vaguely conscious of being carried up the steps of a stone pier and bundled into a car, then through the side door of a hotel and up the back stairs into bathrooms, where friendly hands relieved them of their sodden, sand-loaded garments. Then came the glorious ease of relaxing their exhausted bodies in clear warm water.

It was late afternoon when they were aroused from the deep black slumber which follows intense fatigue, to find themselves in single beds in the same room, with Sir Pellinore Gwaine-Cust and Superintendent Marrowfat standing beside them.

"How're you feeling now, my boy," Sir Pellinore inquired, his hand on Gregory's shoulder.

Gregory gazed round the strange room with a vacant stare. "Where—where are we?" he asked after a moment.

"Granville Hotel, Ramsgate. By jove you've had a gruelling—but you're safe out of it all now."

"For God's sake go away and let me sleep again," Gregory muttered.

"Sorry," said Superintendent Marrowfat abruptly. "We let you lie as long as we dare, but I must have any information you've got to give us. Come along, Wells, let's have your story."

Gerry Wells moaned as he hoisted himself up against his pillows. His pair of strange pyjamas his back and chest were bandaged, although he could still feel the vise-like grip of the life line round his body.

Slowly and painfully the told his superior of the evil chance that had brought about their capture the night before and of the manner in which they had very nearly lost their lives.

Gregory had been gathering his strength. He looked up at Sir Pellinore. "What brought you on the scene so opportunely? If you hadn't turned up when you did we'd both be fiddling in heaven now—or stoking up the coals."

Sir Pellinore grinned. "No thanks to me, my boy. Sabine telephoned to me from Quex Park a little after midnight. She said they had caught you both and that Gavin Fortescue had just left for Ash Levell. She seemed to know about the quicksand too and gave a pretty good forecast of what they were likely to do with you."

Gregory frowned. "A little after midnight! Why the hell weren't you there before then! In a fast car you could have made that place in a couple of hours, whereas you took darned near six and very nearly turned up too late into the bargain."

The fat Superintendent coughed. "I'm afraid that's my fault, Mr. Sallust. Sir Pellinore got on to the Yard at once and they reached me at my home. We were down here by a little before three, so we could have raided the cottage, if we'd wanted to. But this thing's such a terrible threat to the well-being of the country that we've just got to get all the threads in our hands before we act. If we'd rushed that place we would have got you out all right, but we'd have been too late to pinch Lord Gavin and, apart from that, we haven't yet succeeded in getting on to the London organization."

A sardonic smile twitched at Gregory's thin lips. "So you took a chance . . ."

The Superintendent laughed. Not a very big one. We knew they wouldn't shoot you unless you did something stupid. Our scheme went like clockwork. They think you're dead and that they're safe as houses, so no alarm will have been given. You're out of it and we'll be able to pull them in just when we wish."

Gregory nodded. "Good staff work I suppose, but devilish hard on the nerves, and you've made a pretty fine mess of my poor old carcass."

"Maybe, but did you get anything? That's what I had to wake you up to know."

"I did," said Wells with new enthusiasm. "I managed to spot the address on that case before they grabbed me. Mitbloom & Allison, 43, Barter Street, E. 1."

"Good boy," the Superintendent chuckled into his double chin. "I'm leaving for London now and we'll take a look over the place tonight. The doctor tells me there's no damage done to either of you; although you'll be a bit sore in the ribs for the next few days. You'd both better take it easy, I'm thinking, while I get on with the job."

Gerry Wells sat up, suppressed a groan, and said: "Half a minute, sir. This is my pigeon. Surely you're not going to do me out of it just because I was fool enough to get caught last night. If I caught the last train up then I could be in on the raid—couldn't I, sir?"

The Superintendent nodded. "Certainly, if you're fit."

At eight o'clock the manager of the hotel called them and superintended the preparations for an excellent meal to be served in their room.

Wells and Gregory both felt terribly stiff, but apart from that, and the soreness under their arms, perfectly well again after their thirteen hours in bed. Dressing proved a painful operation, but once it was accomplished and they had been heartened by a good dinner, washed was waiting for them when they came downstairs and they caught the 9:08 to London arriving at Charing Cross two minutes before midnight.

At the Yard all preparations for the secret raid had been completed. Mitbloom & Allison had proved to be a firm of wholesale tobacco merchants. Their warehouse, so the Superintendent had ascertained, was fitted with electric burglar alarms, but they did not employ a night watchman. Arrangements had been made for the electric current to be cut off at the main between the hours of one and three.

The Superintendent, Gregory, Gerry Wells, a lock expert from the special department, and another detective, squeezed themselves into one of the bigger Flying Squad cars at a quarter to one, and the driver turned its nose eastward.

They parked the car at the end of Barter Street, leaving the driver with it. A city policeman touched his helmet to the Superintendent, having been warned of their visit, and remained on the corner to keep watch, while the five others made their way along the narrow pavement to number 43.

Grimy window panes stared at them blankly from the street level; above, the big hook and ball of a crane for hauling merchandise to the upper floors dangled over their heads. The Superintendent looked at his watch.

"Five past one. Go ahead, Jim," he said.

The lock expert produced a bag of tools and, selecting one, started work on the door. "Lock's easy enough," he murmured. "Old-fashioned piece." With a twist of his wrist it clicked back into its socket.

Pushing the door open the five men entered the building. The Superintendent switched on his torch. It showed a dusty hallway with a flight of stone steps leading to the upper floors and, on their left, two glass-paneled swing doors giving on to the offices. Thrusting them wide, the fat Superintendent led the way in.

The beam of his torch, as he flashed it round, showed shelves with rows of faded letter files upon them; an old-fashioned clerk's desk, with high stools in front of it, and a rusty brass rail which carried a number of leather-bound ledgers. Another door with a frosted glass panel, on which was painted "Private" in black letters, showed to the right. The lock expert set to work again and soon had it open.

The inner office was little better than the one they had just glanced over. A roll-top desk occupied a corner near the window; a meager square of turkey carpet failed to conceal all but a small portion of the worn oilcloth with which the floor was covered. An open bookcase contained piles of old trade journals, samples, and miscellaneous paraphernalia.

"We'll come back here later," said the Superintendent. "First I want to see the contents of the warehouse."

They trooped out behind him and up the stone stairs to the first floor It was an empty barn-like room, containing only several stacks of cases. The Superintendent pointed: Wells and the extra detective pulled one out from the middle of a stack and, by means of a jimmy which the lock man produced from his bag of tools, opened it up. It was a long-ish coffin-shaped case and contained tins of leaf tobacco.

They hammered back the nails carefully, so that it should not appear to have been opened, and replaced it in the center of the stack.

The contents of four other cases were investigated from different portions of the room and the Superintendent noted down particulars of the goods they contained in his pocket book. Then they visited the upper floor and the same process was gone through with other consignments of merchandise which they found there. The top floor and able manner restored order after the cry of "Fire" was heard, and the passengers were induced to make their wills in view of the seriousness of the situation. Humorous were the items, personal and otherwise, bequeathed to the school, the teachers, and underclassmen, the will being read by Francis O'Boyle, taking the part of a lawyer.

One exciting moment following another, pirates under leadership of Captain Patsy Capecci, boarded the boat, these "pirates" bearing the names of "Exams," "Tests," "Math," "Typing," etc. Being challenged to a duel by one of the sailors, Caesar Cianciosi, the pirates' captain was mortally wounded and carried from the deck, the voyage then continuing with act three being entitled "All Ashore." Margaret Phipps was the singer, she giving "A Gypsy Told Me," after which the Gypsy, Fannie Martini, looked into the future to see what lay in store for the members of the class of '38. Gifts of a humorous nature were presented to all.

The closing minutes on board ship were given over to presentation of gifts to the class advisors, Miss Gladys Hewitt and William Boyd, presentations being made by Captain Dick.

The song "We Joined the Navy to See the World," and the accompanying dance by the sailors was roundly applauded, as was also the dance of the stewards and stewardesses armed with brushes and pans.

The prologue included the following participants: Buglers, George Heath and Jack Wichser; class spirit, Doris Barr; class history, Jean Rosser.

The sailors were: John Bustraan, Melvin Fry, Raymond Jones, Russell Tubers, Leon Cialella, Harry Hinman, William Roberts, James Torano, Peter DeLuca, Vernon Howell, Stanley Schell, Jack Spencer, Wesley Berry, Caesar Cianciosi, Joseph Snyder, James Wollard.

Stewards: Saramay Bassett, Mary Ann Duffy, Anna Keers, Julia Houser, Rose Navetta, Anna Nealis, Helen DeVitte, Isabelle Margerum, Lola McLaughlin, Jean Roberts.

Stewardesses: Catherine Colgan, Alba Conrad, Mary Eckert, Martha Gibson, Ethel George, Norma Davidson, Mollie Wright, Amelia Leeper, Fannie Martini, Ellen Gallagher.

Passengers: George Carter, Emmett Hutchison, Anita Zug, Raymond Dewees, Doris Mershon, Noma Johnson, David Hetherington, Ruth Mutch, Minerva Anderson, Margaret Phipps, Wilhelmina Peters, Anna Brown, Matilda Cherubini, Rita Quigley, Clara Caucci, Joseph Dilissio, Kathryn Quinn, Peter DeLuca, Sophie Faras, Helen Simon, Salvatore Fiorelli, Ellen Gallagher, Mary Weber, Mildred Booz, Albertus Gilbert, Anna Leszak, Alice Prine, William Hess, Francis O'Boyle, Joseph Tunis, Julia Hutchinson, Hazel White, Irene Sharp, Nick Indelicato, Elvira Paglione, Doris Slack, Ruth Jeffries, Rose Marie Paone, Nan Townsend, Ruth Richardson, James VanZant.

Three committees aided in the production, namely:

Script—Jean Rosser, David Hetherington, Kathryn Quinn, Martha Gibson, John Richardson, Marvin Skeath, Doris Mershon, Emmett Hutchinson, Doris Barr, Jack Spencer, Margaret Phipps, Catherine Colgan, Anita Zug.

Stag set—Ralph Scheffey, William Roberts, Walter Tomlinson, John Bustraan, Vernon Howell, Harry Hinman.

Costumes and properties—Saramay Bassett, Anna Nealis. The accompanist was Marion Mulholland.

At the conclusion of the class program, Mrs. David Neill, president of the Mothers' Association of the schools, announced the winner of the Mothers' Association essay contest, the winner of this prize of $10 being Raymond Dewees.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

Patrons of the Bristol Theatre who see the Republic photoplay, "Two Wise Maids," will witness the unusual spectacle of a husky prizefighter going down to defeat before a nine-year-old girl—in a rope skipping contest! Little Doris Brenn, child actress who supports Alison Skipworth and Polly Moran in their co-starring roles, outskips big Maxie Rosenbloom in a test of skill and endurance.

The film deals with the escapades of two wise spinster school marms who attempt to maintain law and order in a tough neighborhood in New York's Lower East Side. Full of human interest and warm heart appeal, it features some of Hollywood's most appealing child stars including lovely Marcia May Jones, Jackie Searl and Donald Haines. Supporting roles are ably carried by Lila Lee, Luis Alberni, Donald Cook and a brilliant newcomer, Hope Manning.

GRAND

In 1935 Bette Davis received the Motion Picture Academy Award for the best screen performance of the year, the most coveted recognition that a star can receive. She won it for her work in "Dangerous." And now, in 1938, it looks very much as though she will again be the winner for her performance in "Jezebel," the drama which shows today at the Grand Theatre.

Quoting Ed Sullivan, movie columnist for New York's Daily News: "Bette Davis in 'Jezebel' is a good bet for the 1938 Academy Award. . . . She's terrific." Sullivan is only one of the country's leading critics who have nominated Bette as their candidate for the honor.

Cast as a devastating siren of New Orleans in pre-Civil War days, Bette's portrayal is said to be magnificent by all the previewers. And the screen public knows that no actress is quite so capable at playing heartless flirts as the dynamic Miss Davis. With her in the cast are George Brent, Henry Fonda, Margaret Lindsay, Fay Bainter, Donald Crisp, Richard Cromwell, John Litel, and many other famous players. William Wyler directed.

CHEMICAL MIXERS GET FORMULAS CONFUSED

The Rohm and Haas team seemed to fall to pieces in the sixth inning of its tilt with the Superior Zinc nine last evening on Leedom's field as the zinc smelte s hurt the Maple Beach team's chances for the first half by handing them a 7-4 lacing.

Until the sixth, the Rohm and Haas nine was in the lead, 4-3, when fireworks started. "Camel" Breslin started it all with a resounding triple to center. Joe Roe doubled to left, and Breslin was over. McGinley reached base on an error by Massilla, Roe counting. Williams flied out but Joe McCue smacked a triple to left, scoring McGinley. McCue counted the fourth run of the frame on a passed ball. Massilla committed two consecutive errors after Zeffries struck out but Stromp flied out.

"SAINTS" INCREASE LEAD BY DEFEATING "ODDIES"

Jake Praul felt the wrath of the St. Ann's bats last evening on the Grundy diamond as the Saints increased their lead in the Bristol Twilight League to a full game. The Oddies' twirler was nicked for seven hits as the final score read: St. Ann's, 9; Odd Fellows, 2.

A trio of markers in the first, second and fourth innings gave the Wood St. clan the edge. Their seven hits were divided among three players: George Dougherty, Joey Heftman and Danny Hines but there always seemed to be runners on base when these boys stepped to the platter and they promptly drove them in.

The remainder of the St. Ann's lineup could do little with Praul, eight going down on strikes. He issued four passes and did not appear to be in his usual good form with runners on base.

LANGHORNE WINS; IN TIE WITH BRISTOL

MORRISVILLE, June 3—A degraded Morrisville High team gave the second-place Langhorne Redskins a sensational battle as the latter fought to remain in the running for the lower division title of the Lower Bucks County League but were finally submerged by Bill McCahan and the boys of coach Beck, 2-1, in a fine hurler's duel on Island Park Field yesterday afternoon. As a result of the victory, Langhorne was lifted in to a tie for first place with Bristol for the crown in the lower section of the circuit and now must meet the Cardinals again to play-off for the sectional championship next week.

BRAGG PITCHES TEAM TO VICTORY; SCORE, 5-1

Behind the superb pitching of E. Bragg, the Excelsiors defeated the Langhorne Giants in a colored League game last night by a 5-1 score.

Bragg's held the Giants hitless until the last inning when with two men out and two strikes on Skinzy Davis, he threw one to Davis' liking and he cracked a clean single to left field, scoring Derry, who had been walked for the Giants' lone run and barring Bragg from entering the hall of fame. Davis, besides getting the only hit for the Giants also pitched good ball for the losers, except in the second inning when three X's hits along with three Giants errors stood good for four runs and the ball game.

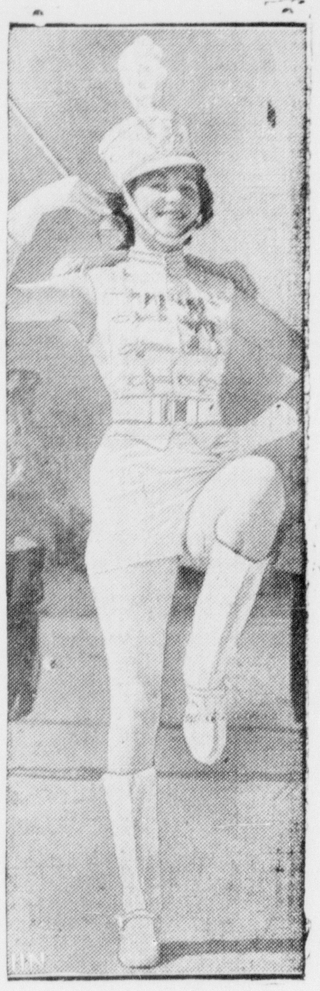
Wins New Honors



Bobbie Vaughn

In addition to winning the title of "Miss Mississippi" at the state beauty contest this year, pretty Bobbie Vaughn has the distinction of having led her home town band from Magnolia, Miss., to victory in both the marching and concert finals of the national high school band contest at Louisville.

LANGHORNE SOFTBALL TEAM WINS CROWN

LANGHORNE, June 3—The Langhorne "Squaws" are champions of the Lower Bucks County Softball League for 1938 as a result of their lop-sided 28-8 win over the Newtown Bluebelles, here, Wednesday afternoon.

Coach Anna Corn's proteges went through the campaign without a setback in their six contests and in only one game were they forced to the limit to polish off their opponents, although both Bensalem and Buckingham were beaten by Langhorne when the Squaws put on big rallies in the late innings to win the game. Only Richboro, whom Langhorne nosed out 9-8, gave the league champions a tough battle all the way through.

adults perform on horses and give a miniature Rodeo.

Northrup, with his educated cow-pony, "Bess," appeared during the past week-end at the races held at Village Farm, Langhorne.

"Bess" is booked as the cow-pony with a human mind. She is 10 years old, weighs 1,000 pounds, and is a dark chestnut sorrel. Northrup states that he uses a wardrobe valued at $600.

Northrup says:

"Bess walks on her knees. Sits down. Waltzes. Counts her age. Lies down. Kisses a girl's cheek. Takes a handkerchief from my hip pocket and wipes my nose. Unties a knot. Walks to where I am and lies down beside me. I crawl on her back. She rises and walks off. She unties knots from her front foot. She unties my hands which are tied behind my back. Takes a whisk broom and brushes me off, then brushes my hat off. Takes a six-shooter from my hip pocket and carries it to anyone I command her to—picks up a bottle and carries it to some prominent person nearby. Spins a rope with her mouth. Holds papers in her mouth while I cut them with a black snake whip. Then she takes a buggy whip and cuts papers from my mouth. Bess also walks a board 2" x 8" x 2' high x 12' long. She kneels down, I mount, my hat falls off. She picks it up and hands it to me."

There are other numerous acts which this trained horse does, which thrill her audiences.
